

Infosys Named Royal Bank of Scotland Group's 2007 "Best Technology Supplier"

Infosys chosen for its ability to deliver predictability and scalability

Edinburgh, UK – June 26, 2007: Infosys Technologies Limited (NASDAQ: INFY) today announced that it has been named the Royal Bank of Scotland (RBS) Best Technology Supplier of 2007. Infosys provides RBS with software development and testing services. Infosys was selected to receive the RBS Supplier Excellence Award for its ability to provide a high level of delivery confidence, which in turn enabled RBS to significantly enhance the speed to market of its product offerings.

Since 2002 RBS has engaged with Infosys on several key technology initiatives to rationalise and integrate their enterprise systems. Mike Errington, Director IT Development, RBS said, "Technology underpins most, if not all RBS services, delivering the speed, reliability and instant access that our customers and staff demand. Success in today's environment requires a strong commitment to delivery with an emphasis on innovation and improvement. Infosys has been a trusted partner in our success, consistently enabling commercial benefits while also working with us to provide an exceptional level of service and quality improvements. We are pleased to recognise Infosys as the RBS Best Technology Supplier of 2007."

"Our engagement with RBS is a wonderful example of the trust that can develop over the life of a healthy relationship," BG Srinivas, Head of EMEA, Infosys Technologies said. "Infosys focuses on delivering a high level of customer satisfaction through robust solutions and services that create quality, long-term engagements. This is why we see 95% of our business repeat. We are proud of the work we have been able to accomplish with RBS over the last four years."

Andy MacLellan, Director Group Purchasing, RBS and Frank McGrath, Director IT Operations, RBS presented the award to the Infosys Account Team, on April 19, 2007 at RBS' Supplier Excellence Awards Ceremony in Edinburgh.
