

Infosys' Life Sciences Digital Marketing Services

The Life Sciences industry has to deal with multiple threats of patent cliff, increasing regulations and the need to communicate treatment options to multiple audiences through their preferred channels. Pharmaceutical and Healthcare companies constantly advance their digital marketing capabilities to increase their stakeholder reach and tap into the latest developments in the digital marketplace. The goal is to provide customer centric, impactful messages across multiple channels for better customer satisfaction, increase patient adherence to improve health outcomes, hence, increase revenue and enhance marketing return on investment.

Infosys addresses these challenges through a digital marketing framework that puts the customer in the center and allows multichannel conversations with the customer including physician, patient, provider, and institution. This also enables getting customer feedback for advanced analytics to understand customer behavior, content preference, channels for targeted and impactful customer interactions improving marketing effectiveness.

Infosys forecasts the average spend on Digital as a channel increases by 15-20% every year for the Life Sciences industry, streamlining marketing operations services would result in simplifying digital adoption, improving utilization of digital assets and have proven to cut operational cost by 25 - 30%. This saving can now be re-invested in extending and deepen the relationships with global customers and drive marketing & sales innovation.
